For the last four years I have been working as a freelance film maker. Creating narrative shorts and brand and lifestyle films. Working with award-winning agencies such as Bert and Creative Spark as well as working directly for clients such as White Stuff Clothing.

I now work under the umbrella of Truck Films for which I produce, direct and edit. I have my own equipment and the ability to self-shoot but I also have a large network of incredibly talented creatives from cinematographers to composers - this means I can be flexible depending on the size of the job.

My narrative short films have been nominated for the British Comedy Awards and one has over 100,000 hits on Youtube (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dtg_QHQxy9s). They have also made official selection at Palm Springs, SITT, ASFF and London short film festival amongst others.

My work can be viewed here:

Before moving into film I co-founded the award-winning and arts council funded theatre company Papatango. So I have a strong grounding in producing new artistic work and also making it relevant and financially sustainable. I was artistic director of the company between 2008-2011 before stepping down to concentrate on film.
